

Trevor Tolhurst
of Fuji Sericol said:

Thank you for allowing me to participate in the Screen Printing course.

There certainly is no doubt that this e-learning activity provides essential background knowledge on the very wide range of topics encountered in screen printing. The links to various associated websites is excellent.

The key message I obtained from being a participant was the need to recognise and control the high number of variables associated with the practicality of the process. All of the information is theory based, which is unfortunate for a topic which by its nature is very practical.

I consider this programme ideal for those participants who are happy with the reading style of learning. Therefore to accommodate the widest range of learning styles the course would benefit from having a greater variety of activities.

With regard to evidence of learning, the multiple choice questionnaires (of which there are many) are well suited to participants who have the ability to remember (especially numbers, dates etc) or who have good deduction skills.

Finally, the course is clearly 'desk bound' and would provide support for a practical workshop based application.

Regards
Trevor